Why was All Passive Services Created?

James Taylor has worked in the fire protection industry since 2007 and has worked his way from field technician to one of the leading passive fire companies in NSW. While always being involved with passive fire and fire rated building products, it was evident that there was a large hole in the industry and passive fire was the forgotten fire measure. Considering the lack of support and knowledge in the fire protection industry towards passive fire, it was clear that he needed to forget about active fire protection and concentrate on passive fire protection. James wanted to make sure that these continuous issue found during annual inspections would be rectified during construction. He started supplying services to builders anticipating that if it was installed correctly during construction, then the client/owners of these buildings only need to maintain these measures. Now they regularly attend site for owners/strata ensuring the builder has built to code and rectify any defects during their warranty period.

Now All Passive Services provides 9 years of knowledge and experience in a relatively new and inexperienced industry.
